GAS GENERATOR RENTAL OPTION LAUNCHED

Clarke Energy, the UK's exclusive distributor of Jenbacher engines, has become the first company to offer a rental facility on its gas engine generators.

It is anticipated that the first major sector to benefit will be landfill sites. The purpose-designed Jenbacher containerised landfill sets have consistently proved themselves in this type of constant duty operation, being particularly adept at handling significant variations in landfill gas methane levels.

Now landfill site operators can rent gas generators for a limited period to utilise peaks in landfill gas availability. The temporary units can be used alongside existing installed sets or can be used self-sufficiently where there has been no previous generation.

As well as landfill, Clarke Energy believes the rental option will be popular within combined heat and power applications. For example, where a company is in the middle of relocating to a new building or is installing a new boiler plant, but still needs to maintain heat and power in between time, the rented generators offer an attractive and competitively priced short term solution.

Commenting on the initiative, Clarke's managing director, Ian Davis said, "The highly efficient and reliable Jenbacher engines are an increasingly popular choice in landfill gas and CHP applications, but not every customer wants, or needs, to commit to an extended period installation contract. The rental service, now available on all our Jenbacher gas powered generators, offers a flexibility which we believe the market will welcome."
